Child Protection

In July, 1975 the Virginia General Assembly amended the Code of Virginia to require state social service agencies to provide services to families of injured and neglected children. Section (63.1-248.7) establishes a central registry of suspected child abuse and neglect instances within the Commonwealth.
An integral segment of the operation is a toll-free telephone number 1-800-552-7096, where complaints from throughout the State are received around the clock.
Each local department of welfare or social services in turn has a social worker assigned to investigate abuse and neglect complaints. The worker is available 24-hours a day and investigates cases of apparent extreme abuse or neglect at any hour of the day or night. An investigation is made of all cases within 24 hours of the complaint. Calls should be made to the Appomattox County Dept. of Social Services 352-7125 or the Appomattox County Sheriff's Department 352-8241 who will in turn contact the social worker on call.
After completing an investigation, a local office reports back to the Bureau of Child Protective Services' central registry in Richmond. The central registry aids in identifying abusers who may move throughout the State. The fact that your name or your child's name is in the central registry means that you have been or will be visited by a social worker who is concerned about your family's situation or a child in your home. Your social worker will be talking with you about these concerns and what they mean.
What Is Included In These Files?
1. The child's name, address, and other identifying information.
2. The child's parents' names and address(2s). The complaintant's name, if given.
3. The name and address of the alleged abuser or neglector and his relationship to the child.
4. The findings of the investigation worker - whether founded or unfounded - and follow-up reports.
Confidentiality
Information in the Central Registry are subject to the provisions of Section 63.1-53 of the Code of Virginia, which states:
"All records and statistical registries of the State Dept. of Welfare . . . and of the local boards and other information which records, registries, and information shall not be disclosed except to persons having a legitimate interest . . .
Those with legitimate interest include Child Protective Service workers, Foster Care workers, Adoption workers, and the courts, when a subpoena is requested.
Safeguards of Confidentiality
To protect the confidentiality of the records maintained in the Central Registry file room Bureau of Child Protective Services (Richmond, Va.) certain security measures are employed:
1. Only authorized personnel are allowed in the file room, which is protected by bolt locks, and is manned 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.
2. A code form is issued to all those with a legitimate interest, and no information is released without the correct response to the code.
In No other instance, except for Court Produced Subpoenas is any informaiton contained in the files released, regardless of the circumstances.
The primary concern in all matters is the safety of the child. In some minor cases of abuse or neglect, the local office will work with the parents in an attempt to resolve the frustrations that lead to the neglect or abuse.
In cases of more severe abuse, a child can be taken into custody for up to 72-hours. This is strictly a last resort measure. If it occurs, however, the court is notified of the action and is supplied with copies of the local agency's investigation, plus any medical reports, before it makes a final decision on the case. The final decision could result in the child being removed from the home and being placed in permanent foster care.
If during the course of an investigation a social worker discovers the possibility that a felony has been committed, the Commonwealth's Attorney is notified.
